SCARSDALE MEN CROSS ATLANTIC IN A 54-FOOTER

Only Communication With Outside World Was When Spotted By the Roosevelt

WERE THOUGHT SHIPWRECKED

Run Into Three Squalls, But Are Enthusiastic Over Trip; Joined Party While Racing in Bermuda

Enthusiastic over trans-Atlantic navigation in a 54-foot cutter, George Gallowher of Scarsdale, a Princeton student, arrived in port, New York, this yesterday afternoon on the United States liner George Washington. He was accompanied on his return trip by William G. Gallowhur, well known yachtsman of Scarsdale.

"Did anyone Gallowhur confided to a correspondent of the Reporter, "that there was really nothing to the trip."

"Of course," he continued, "one gets whaler up a bit more on a sloop like that than on the George Washington. But as far as danger, there wasn't any. It took us 24 days to get across and during that time we ran into three squalls, none of them very serious.

"The only communication we had with anything but the stars during the 24 days was when we were spotted by the S. S. President Roosevelt. It was many miles away from us and how the lookout managed to spy us, a mere speck on the water, I don't know. But they saw us and steered for out of their course to find out who we were. Probably took us for the lifeboat of some stranded vessel. When they pulled alongside they asked us if there was anything they could do. We told them we would be pleased if they would notify our people that we were all right, which I understand they did."

There were seven others in the Jolleebue in addition to Gallowhur, all being Englishmen. The Scarsdale lad picked them up in Bermuda where he had gone to race in his own boat and where the Jolliebrue was also racing. He accepted their invitation to cross the Atlantic with them.

When on the other side Gallowhur did some speed boat racing at the Cowes week regatta in England.

The elder Mr. Gallowhur made a hasty trip, only being in England about five days before he boarded the George Washington to return with his son.

"But all that's over for a while," Gallowhur said wistfully to the Reporter correspondent. "I've got to go back to Princeton and get more education. I'm in the class of '29 there, you know."

SEEKS TO ENJOIN SCARSDALE FROM BUILDING A TANK

Alice Beaver-Webb Says Reservoir Next to Her Estate Would Ruin Its Value

SUES FOR AN INJUNCTION

Says That She Purchased Her Home Several Years Ago to Spend Rest of Her Life; Wants to Keep it Beautiful

Alice Beaver, wealthy resident of Scarsdale, whose estate on Cushman Road is one of the show places of Westchester County, today applied to the Supreme court for an injunction restraining the Village of Scarsdale from erecting a 2,000,000 gallon reservoir on the property adjoining her estate.

She claimed that the proposed plan of the village authorities, would deteriorate the value of her eight-acre property by many thousands of dollars. She said that she purchased the estate several years ago so that she might have a country home in which to spend the rest of her life. She also contended that the zoning regulations precluded any other type of construction but residences.

The petitioner said that the proposed reservoir would stand within two hundred feet of her property, and would detract from the beauty of a rock garden which she created at a large cost. She said that she was given to understand that the reservoir would be one hundred feet high and sixty-five feet in diameter. It was also charged that the village board of trustees approved the plan over the protests of her attorney, George Gordon Battle. A hearing is scheduled during the September term of court.

Council Votes Unanimously To Make Third Avenue Run Trolleys on Five-Cent Fare

Decision After Executive Meeting Comes As Surprise; Not Satisfied That Busses Are Better, McLaughlin Says.

WANT A CROSS-COUNTY ROUTE

The proposal of the Third Avenue Railroad Company to substitute busses for trolleys on the Mamaroneck, Scarsdale and Silver Lake lines at a ten cent fare was unanimously rejected last night by Mayor Frederick C. McLaughlin and the Common Council.

Instead, the city will compel the company to operate trolleys here on a five cent fare as provided in the franchise of the Westchester Street Railroad Company, which the Third Avenue interests purchased a few weeks ago at public auction for $70,000.

The decision came after a closed session of the council, last night, at which the comparative benefits of trolleys and busses were said to have been thoroughly discussed. The council's unanimous rejection came as a complete surprise in official circles, as the mayor and several of its members had given broad hints yesterday that the plan was in general acceptable to the city.

The trolleys have been running on a five-cent fare since June 1st, when the former receiver W. Leverett S. Miller, had planned to discontinue them to substitute busses. Prior to that time the fare had been ten cents for a zone, making the cost of travel approximately four times what it is at present.

"We are not by any means sold on the desirability of busses," McLaughlin said today. "It has not been fully demonstrated that busses are preferable to trolleys.

"It might be a great mistake for White Plains to lose its trolley system at the present time.

"It is very difficult to reach any plan of solving the present transportation problem which would not have some objections.

McLaughlin said that he and the council decided against the Third Avenue proposal because it provided for the substituting of busses after a recent act which would have permitted the Third Avenue to scrap the trolley franchise entirely without a moment's delay.

We want assurance that will show that the rights of the people are better protected than they are at present before we will [illegible] that busses are better than trolleys.

RUSH FOR BLDG. PERMITS WHILE THEY ARE FREE

30 of Them Are Issued in 24 Hours on Final Day Before Fee Is Charged

A rush to obtain building permits before fees are collected for them beginning next week was on at the Department of Public Works in the City Hall this morning.

Up until 10:30 o'clock this morning, more than thirty permits had been issued since Friday morning. One of the permits issued was to Patrolman J. C. Kelley of the police force and his brother, to erect a 16-family apartment house.

When Deputy Commissioner Brennan opened his office this morning permits for nine residences had been issued during the week. By 10:30 o'clock nine more had been issued, mostly for small houses. A permit had been issued for a nine-family apartment during the week and an other for an eight-family apartment was issued early this morning.

The indications up to this morning were that this week would be behind last in the issuance of building permits, the total to this morning being only $236,050 against $565,075 last week. By 10:30, however, $422,000 in permits had been issued with others waiting to obtain them.

So far this month new building in the city totals $2,000,425. The total by weeks is $1,464,250 for the first $216,500 for the second, $565,075 for the third and $422,000 for the present week until 10:30 this morning.
